PROVEN HISTORY OF A BRILLIANT CLASSIC PROPERTY LOCATION THE MYSTERY OF THE ORIGINS OF SAN DIEGO Originally, what would become Mission San Diego was an adobe village inhabited by the Chumash people who were the first inhabitants of the area. Today, the mission houses a museum and visitor center and is the site of events, festivals and public programs throughout the year. The pueblo or adobe village of Mission San Diego is a National Historic Landmark. On July 6, 1769, Father Junipero Serra received a Mexican land grant from the hands of the Spanish king and established Mission San Diego. The mission was named for St. Diego de Alcalá, the fourth bishop of Toledo. The Chumash Indians lived near the coast in the area that is now San Diego. The mission was built to serve as a refuge from the frequent attacks by the Chumash, Comanches, Indians from New Mexico, and other Indians. The Mission San Diego Indians helped the Spaniards defeat the Chumash. A legend tells of the mission’s six bells. Serra believed that one of the bells was a gift from one of the Indian tribes that
