Only in the case of no files to be read will this cause a crash, i. e. for unknown reasons, likely data structures are corrupted, internally all is fine. So you may assume the problem is not in the program (i. e. your disk, your harddrive), but in your Windows system. The ultimate goal of this project is to understand the molecular basis for the metabolic function of enzymes in the 'fatty acid synthesis pathway'. Fatty acids are important signaling molecules which are used in the body for a variety of physiological processes. In mammals, the first committed step in the synthesis of fatty acids is the acylation of serine or threonine residues on protein. Two key enzymes in this pathway are FabH and FabK. FabH catalyzes the first and FabK the last step of fatty acid synthesis. In this proposal we will continue our efforts to determine the structures of FabH and FabK in their ground states. We also plan to determine their transition states on substrates, products and co-enzymes. This project also represents a collaborative effort to determine the three dimensional structure of the "fatty acid-binding protein (FabB)" by X-ray crystallography. We have obtained very diffractive crystals and are currently in the process of determining the structure. The long-term impact of this research will be the clarification of the molecular bases for the binding and reactivity of fatty acids and for understanding enzyme catalysis in the fatty acid synthesis pathway.
