I'm currently making a pretty large, linear character who wants to use a weapon once a round and I'm figuring Lycaon is a good comparison. I'm working from her abilities in the book which allows her to sheath a weapon as a free action before drawing it (as long as the weapon is sheathed when she is), if she is in melee range she gets to use her free action to roll a natural 20 and do a full attack (round, full attack action with 1 round of movement) or something to that effect. She has the ability to deal more damage than her Strength and Attack would normally allow from the weapons sheathed. As long as she is proficient in the weapon she has Weapon Specialization and the weapon is kept sheathed she gains a +1 bonus to Armor Class, a maximum of +3 when using the Weapon Specialization and the weapon is sheathed.
