'A Different Kind Of Planet' NASA's most recent image of the Red Planet, acquired by the Mars Exploration Rover Opportunity in 2011, shows martian terrain covered in reddish sand and dust. Images similar to this one were taken earlier this year by Opportunity as it continues to explore the planet. Credit: NASA/JPL/Cornell University. While the Curiosity rover might be about to make history with its discovery that water flowed on Mars centuries ago, its sister rover, Opportunity, has been an unwitting witness to martian geology through the years. The newest pictures of Mars' surface are vastly different from what the rover's counterparts on the planet took until just a few months ago. The Martian landscape has changed with each passing season since landing in 2004. A new study points out that more dramatic changes lie in wait. "Mars is a different kind of planet," says Lance Benning, a scientist with NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, California, where both rovers are based. It may be the closest planet to Earth in size, but it has varied a lot over the past 4.5 billion years -- and it's still changing now. The monthly temperature cycle and precipitation patterns are slightly different than Earth's, and the atmosphere has continually changed. The planet's geology, particularly the surface, may have also varied, but the amount of work done by Opportunity in the 4.5 years it has been exploring the planet could be the final piece of the puzzle, Benning says. The diversity in martian geology has been on display the last five seasons as both Opportunity and Curiosity have been moving across the surface. For the first two decades of the mission, the rover teams didn't know where to go to study martian geology. However, they've finally figured it out:

Both indomethacin (IN) and nimesulide (NM) have been used to treat osteoarthritis; however, they also have anti-inflammatory, ulcerogenic and carcinogenic properties. Meloxicam (MLX), a new cyclooxygenase-2 (COX-2) selective inhibitor, has been proposed for the treatment of osteoarthritis without these adverse effects. The aim of this study was to investigate the effects of MLX, IN and NM on matrix metalloproteinase (MMP)-1, MMP-2 and MMP-9 from human leukocytes. Each enzyme was assayed using a specific fluorescence substrate with known kinetic properties. MLX, IN and NM dose-dependently inhibited the release of MMP-1 ($IC_{50} = 135.4 \pm 26.9$, 157.4 ± 19.7 and 0.27 ± 0.05 μ M, respectively) and MMP-2 ($IC_{50} = 93.4 \pm 12.7$, 105.9 ± 12.4 and 0.62 ± 0.08 μ M, respectively). Only MLX and IN completely prevented the release of MMP-9 ($IC_{50} = 7.6 \pm 0.2$ and 11.7 ± 1.2 μ M, respectively). None of the drugs altered the MMP expression levels.

Therefore, MLX is more effective than IN and NM in inhibiting MMP-1 and MMP-2 from leukocyte enzymes. These findings may contribute to our understanding of the pharmacological profile of MLX, although more studies are needed to confirm these data. Q: loop is converting inputs into string So I just started learning python and I'm trying to write a piece of code which asks the user to input a number, then it shows the individual digits to the user and then ask for the numbers to 3da54e8ca3
