Basically, I have a page where all articles are loaded. The user clicks on any news item and shows the details for that item in a second page. The detail view works as intended and it shows the data. But, when I close the detail view, after the data has been loaded, and then I open the detail view again, the data is no longer loaded. Only the essential data and the date of the last article is loaded. I read a lot about finding and model, but I can't figure out why. I want to load all the data at once and when the user comes back to the article he just left, it will be ready. Is there something I am missing about finding? Here is my code. I removed some parts to make it more readable EDIT : The answer to the question below is to use update() instead of find() app.get('/article/:article', function(req, res){ //find all article Articles.find({article: req.params.article}, function(err, articles){ //if find were successful, we return the data iff(articles.length > 0){
