Q: Setting the value of an input field using a data-attribute I am trying to set the value of a text input field to what is set in the data-attribute. I have tried the following: `$('#[data-value="value1"]').attr('value', 'value');` But this doesn't work. I also have the following html: A: `use.val() $('#[data-value="value1"]').val('value');`

A semiconductor device including a semiconductor chip such as a flip chip is expected to operate at a low voltage in recent years in response to the demand of low power consumption. Therefore, it is necessary to increase the integration of the semiconductor chip as well as reduce the contact resistance of the electrode. From this point of view, a technique has been proposed to reduce the contact resistance of the electrode by providing a porous material having an uneven surface on the surface of the electrode. However, the aforementioned technique has a problem in that an uneven portion of the porous material comes off the surface of the electrode when, for example, the semiconductor device is exposed to air..
